

WASATCH COMMUNITY GARDENS

2008 ANNUAL REPORT

OUR MISSION

The mission of Wasatch Community Gardens is to empower people of all ages to grow and eat healthy, organic, local food.

Dear Friends of the Garden,

Thank you for making 2008 an amazing year for WCG. When faced with the possibility of losing the 4th East Garden, a beloved neighborhood garden in the heart of Salt Lake City, you rose to meet the challenge. With your help, we raised over $250,000 in just a few short months and saved the 4th East Garden from development. This incredible success is a reflection of the Salt Lake City community's strong commitment to conserving open space and irreplaceable community resources. At the same time, your countless hours of volunteer work and donor support have also allowed us to improve our innovative programs and provide quality educational opportunities for youth and adults throughout Salt Lake City. Here are a few highlights from the year:

- In our Youth Gardening Program, 1,100 unduplicated youth, many of whom are low-income, had the opportunity to grow, taste, and share 95 varieties of fruits and vegetables.
- Through our Community Gardening Program, 93 individuals and families grew fresh, healthy food in our four community gardens, and our advice and guidance helped foster the creation of eight new community gardens along the Wasatch Front.
- Attendance at our free workshop series doubled. Over 500 people attended 22 organic gardening and sustainable living classes over the course of the year through our Community Education Program. "Urban Chickens" was a real favorite.
- Our dedicated volunteer force continued to grow; 350 volunteers contributed 1590 hours, helping us in the gardens as well as in the office, and making all of our community events possible.
- In December, we were named a "Tastemaker of 2008" by the Salt Lake Tribune.

In 2009, we will substantively increase the number of people who are able to grow their own food, whether in a classroom, in one of our gardens, or in their own backyards. We will continue the success of our current programs and build for the future. Our goals for 2009 include:

- Expanding the reach of our Youth Gardening Program to students in low-income schools through a new partnership with the Salt Lake City School District.
- Helping 10 more groups start or strengthen community gardens along the Wasatch Front.
- Providing opportunities for a more diverse community of individuals to garden organically by offering workshops and gardening information in Spanish.

All of us at Wasatch Community Gardens thank you for your friendship and support. In the coming season, we will celebrate WCG's 20th anniversary! We hope you will take pleasure in our gardens, learn from our organic gardening workshops, and join us for all of our fun events from the annual Plant Sale to the Farmer's Formal. I hope to see you in the garden!

Sincerely,

Claire Uno
Executive Director

Board Chair

P.S. 2009 looks to be a banner year for interest in growing food. We are working on innovative ways to meet the burgeoning demand. Stay tuned!

About Wasatch Community Gardens

Wasatch Community Gardens (WCG) is a community-based, non-profit organization serving Salt Lake County since 1989. Our mission is to empower people of all ages and incomes to grow and eat healthy, organic, local food. WCG's highly successful programs and services include community gardening space, a youth gardening program, and free educational workshops and community events.

Community Gardening Program

The Community Gardening Program endeavors to provide anyone, regardless of income, the opportunity to grow their own fresh, organic vegetables. WCG has four gardens in Salt Lake County, with 86 garden plots available to local residents for growing fresh produce. For a small yearly fee, water, gardening tools and education are provided by WCG.

Youth Gardening Program

WCG's Youth Gardening Program provides opportunities for low-income children to access fresh fruits and vegetables in a positive and fun way. Through hands-on lessons in the garden, the youth participants develop an active interest in consuming fresh fruits and vegetables and the skills and knowledge to grow and prepare those foods. Throughout the year, youth prepare and tend almost 6,000 square feet of garden beds and harvest several thousand pounds of fresh produce to be eaten during class, shared with their families and donated to local food pantries.

Community Education Program

Through free gardening workshops, publications available in print and on our website, and direct outreach activities, we serve as an educational resource for organic gardening methods. Our very popular workshops are taught by local experts and WCG staff. Topics include composting, raising urban chickens, fall and winter planting, and food preservation. We also provide guidance to groups who would like to start new community gardens.

Volunteers

Throughout the year, volunteers help to dig, seed, water, weed, harvest, and compost in our gardens, teach public workshops, and build our youth program curriculum. The work of our volunteers has resulted in the donation of thousands of pounds of produce to local food pantries and the continuation of our four gardens to serve the community as productive and beautiful public green spaces.

Youth Program 2008

Since 1993, our innovative Youth Gardening Program has been the only one of its kind in northern Utah.

Our Youth Gardening Program brings garden-based education to over 1,100 youth, ages 3-18, each year. The youth have fun in the garden as they participate in hands-on activities such as making plant-dyed fabric baskets, finding hidden clues in a scavenger hunt, or harvesting radishes they grew themselves. Along the way, they learn new garden skills, taste and prepare fresh vegetables and fruit, practice teamwork and patience, and develop an appreciation for the outdoors. These lessons empower them to make healthy choices for themselves, their community, and the environment.

It is our goal to provide these fun and educational programs primarily to low-income youth. In recent years:

40% of our participants have been from households whose income level is defined as “extremely low,”

30% from households whose income level is defined as “very low,”

and only 8% from households whose income level is defined as “moderate and above.”*

*These statistics represent the approximately 500 youth participants for whom demographics were tracked. The remaining Youth Gardening Program participants come to us from agencies that do not collect demographic information.

WCG embarked on a new partnership in 2008 with the Salt Lake City School District.

The Salt Lake City School District’s acquisition of new greenhouses made 2008-09 the perfect year to launch WCG’s school garden pilot program. Beginning with one school, WCG is developing and teaching a school garden curriculum for Title I schools that supports core standards for grades K-6. We also provide training for the teachers involved. These new lessons are then posted on the district website for all teachers in the district to easily access and replicate.

Things you might hear at our youth programs:

“That’s kohlrabi, kohlrabi, kohlrabi!” “The bug eggs are stuck to the leaf!” “I like the strawberries because they’re juicy.” “Beans are givers because they put minerals in the soil.” “I don’t like spiders but I like the potato bugs.” “Oooh, carrots! Can I have all those carrots? Can I eat all the carrots?”

Collaboration

Collaboration with partner agencies is absolutely integral to the success of all of our programs, and this is especially true of our Youth Gardening Program. We would like to extend a special thank you to each of the agencies that partnered with us in 2008 to bring gardening education to so many youth.

Feedback from partner agencies:

"We love this program! It clearly supports our mission to enrich the lives of children through positive learning activities."

"The gardening classes provide a unique opportunity for our kids to connect to their neighborhood and learn new skills. I have found that kids who attend the program have a greater appreciation for nature and healthy food."

"The kids love it! They were very happy to go and see that there were things to eat that they helped plant."

"It gives the children an experience they most likely would not receive. Our children are low income. Many move a lot or live in apartments and wouldn't be able to have a garden of their own."

"I like to be able to show the kids that fruits and vegetables come from somewhere other than the grocery store."

4th East Garden Campaign

Over 25 years ago, a group of motivated neighbors in this central city neighborhood came together to turn a weedy, vacant lot into a beautiful garden.

Today, the 4th East Garden, found at 400 East 553 South, has become a well-established and highly productive urban garden. WCG was asked to take over operations of the 4th East Garden in 1995, which had been maintained by the neighbors who started it.

Over the years, the garden yielded thousands of pounds of fresh, healthy and delicious food, and it was a welcome sight of flourishing urban agriculture for neighbors and passers-by. As a community in itself, the garden provided opportunities for leadership and exchange among diverse individuals who otherwise would not have met.

Gardeners and friends gather to celebrate this special place.

Back in 2006, WCG had learned that the land upon which this garden is located was to be sold. Despite quickly rallying to raise significant funds and support, our initial offer was uncompetitive, and the land was purchased by the Community Development Corporation of Utah. Prospects looked dark in the spring of 2007, and our community gardeners prepared for their last season in this special place.

However, after learning more about WCG, and that the loss of the property would come at the expense of an irreplaceable urban community garden, the CDC decided to sell the land to us for the price at which they purchased it. Thus began a frenzy of activity, from the first grants submitted in the fall of 2007 and continuing unabated through the final fundraising event at Squatters Pub Brewery, raising in the end over a quarter of a million dollars.

The time, effort, passion, creativity, and commitment given by so many people to purchase the 4th East Garden and save it as a community garden for perpetuity has been simply overwhelming. From the Wasatch Community Gardens staff and board, to the gardeners, volunteers, and the hundreds of donors large and small, everyone involved was determined to save this precious spot of green in the middle of the city. And now, thanks to the incredible outpouring of support from the community, and the hard work of those dedicated to the garden's continued life, the 4th East Garden will remain a vibrant open space for generations of Salt Lake residents to enjoy and benefit from.

WCG would like to extend a special thanks to the Mayor and City Council, and the City's Open Space Lands Program, for providing half of the funds to make the purchase possible. And of course, a huge thank you to absolutely everyone who donated their time, money and energy to save the 4th East Garden for generations to come!

The lush and verdant 4th East Garden in bloom.

"After 10 years of gardening in this space, I believe it helps support and develop a sense of the land and connection to it through others. It is an inspiring place not only for those who garden, but for the community as well. The garden feeds people in a multitude of ways."

Dana Appling, Community Gardener at the 4th East Garden
